

"All that Glitters is Not Gold" so the saying goes. Running an arts nonprofit with a beautiful, historic home base is a great analogy for this phrase. With pride this winter, our board members and volunteers hand scrubbed the floors, refinished the kitchen cabinets and touched up those footprints left over from BrewFest! With commitment, our staff members swept the courtyard, took out the trash, and rearranged the storage room. With love, our members, pulled out their check books and renewed their commitment to G1. No, it's not all glamour here at 408 N Pearl St, but it is GOLDEN.

Our next exhibit manifests this saying with a national show centered around gold and juried by Keith Lewis and Tariqa Waters. In April we play off that with an exhibit with three artists who integrate debris and discarded materials into their artworks. And in May, we really get #intoart with a regional exhibit of artists who are custom designing those touristy walls that you can put your face in and snap a photo!

Have a look inside for more information. Pecha Kucha is back at G1 on March 16 and the topic is "On Being Human", something we can all relate to. April we host the Inland Poetry Prowl and it's time for Soup Line to benefit our ceramics studio with soups and take-home treasures (ceramic bowls). Bring the family down to G1 for food, art and community!

For the 4th year of ConFab, we're joining forces with the Washington State Arts Alliance to expand our discussions around arts advocacy, education and other critical topics in the arts during their annual Cultural Congress. We are honored to have movers and shakers in the arts here in Ellensburg and are looking forward to create meaningful connections through inspiration, conversation and collaboration. We have lots of scholarship money available for artists in CWA and encourage anyone interested in joining the conversation to attend!

With Spring in the air, we're ready to dig in to the dirt and create something that shines! Try a class in the ceramics studio or with any of our other instructors. Don't forget to check our Facebook page and our website to know exactly what's happening.
